

RUTGERS CENTER FOR EUROPEAN STUDIES

The Invention of Energy Scarcity: Fossil Thinking Before and After Oil in Spain and Trinidad

Series Local Talent:
Europe at Rutgers

Cosponsored with the Rutgers Climate Institute

David M. Hughes

Anthropology, Rutgers

11:00 AM, Thurs., Feb. 6

Academic Bldg. (West) 6051

RSVP for lunch at europe.rutgers.edu

David M. Hughes, Professor of Anthropology at Rutgers University, is author of, among many publications, Energy without Conscience: Oil, Climate Change, and Complicity (Durham 2017); Whiteness in Zimbabwe: Race, Landscape, and the Problem of Belonging (NY 2010); and From Enslavement to Environmentalism: Politics on a Southern African Frontier (Seattle/Harare, 2006). Author of policy as well as academic papers, Hughes is a scholar-activist, seeking to promote social justice and sustainability at the edge of capitalism. Honored by visiting appointments at universities in the West Indies, Zimbabwe, and the Philippines, Hughes has served back home at Rutgers as both president and vice-president of the AAUP-AFT local.

RUTGERS
School of Arts and Sciences